

Project Information for Real Analysis

The project for this course consists of two parts: the written report and the oral report. The written report (worth 80% of the project grade) may be hand written or typed and should be written so that one of your real analysis classmates could understand the material without reading any other reference. The report should be well-organized (with an introduction putting your work into context of what we've learned in class), be written using proper grammar, develop ideas logically, and have appropriate scope. It should be written so that your classmates can learn the topic by reading it.

The oral report (worth 20% of the project grade) will be graded on: Organization (is the presentation well thought out?), Clarity (could the presentation be understood?), and Presentation (speaking clearly, visual aides). If you use transparencies, do not just copy your report. Each transparencies should state no more than 3 or 4 key ideas, usually expressed in incomplete sentences, and with the ideas explained in more detail verbally.

Due date for written report: Thurs. Dec. 12, 2pm.
